Organizational Axiom:

The consciousness of an organization cannot move beyond the consciousness of the leadership. Consequently, it is imperative that leadership teams, ministers and boards understand the roles and accountabilities of leadership, understand the dynamics of ministry, support the creation of a clear vision, mission and core values, and be willing to model all of the above.

Engaging the services of a consultant will enhance the effect of the desired change by a minimum of 30% versus using a person within the system. Our consultants partner to support success for the entire ministry.

The reduction of inter-human conflict, also known as creating peace, arises from the ability to contribute the best of who we are in tandem with the conscious utilization of the tools and skills we are working to master. —Toni G. Boehm

Ministry Skills Institute

Ministry Skills Institute [MSI] outlines the principles of ministry skills development, an introduction to conscious neutrality, the art of conscious questioning, conscious conversation skills, as well as the introductory skills needed to effectively be a ministry skills consultant and/or transition consultant. This training also makes the distinction between peace building and conflict resolution. The concepts presented relate directly to dealing with challenges and interpersonal difficulties that arise in the life of the individual or the ministry.

MSI explores the “integral approach” to understanding the dynamics of ministry. It presents a holistic—all quadrants/all levels—model for understanding and working with conflicts, church growth and transitional issues. The training includes an introduction to a comprehensive board/leadership training designed to be used independently or in conjunction with a Unity Worldwide Ministries ministry skills process, creating dynamic, thriving and sustainable ministries.

MSI outlines the structure and “best” standards of practices adapted for both ministry and transition consulting services. Topics include:

- Principles and goals of minister skills development in creating dynamic, thriving and sustainable module processes
- Transition consulting
- The ministry skills process steps
- Strategies for implementing the ministry skills process
- Case studies
- How to determine whether the minister should stay
- Overview of essential elements required for effective board relationships and functioning
- Group mind, and skills for how to work with it effectively
