After a decade as a Texas banking executive, Patricia was searching for greater purpose in her life when she walked in the doors of Unity of Houston, Texas, in 1990. It was there that she received her calling to become a Unity minister and quickly joined the church staff to manage its 500+ volunteers. After six years, she and her family moved to Missouri where she received her ordination in 1998. She returned to Unity of Houston and served as senior associate minister under the leadership of her dear friend and mentor Rev. Howard Caesar. In 2004, Patricia moved to Kansas to become senior minister of Unity Church of Overland Park.

After retiring from full-time church ministry in 2013, Patricia was called into greater leadership for the Unity movement, first as interim vice president of Silent Unity and later as interim CEO for Unity Worldwide Ministries. She also served on the boards of Unity World Headquarters and the Unity South Central Region, as well as an assortment of other teams in Unity and beyond.

Through it all, Patricia has sought to help people come to know the power of love and loving and realize their own worthiness. She is known for her own loving energy and her commitment to prayer. Her greatest joy to this day is praying with someone.

Patricia's husband of 40 years, Brian Bass, has been her steady support and partner in ministry. Their family includes two daughters, Amanda and Teresa Bass, and Teresa's husband, James Dempsey.
